TREE DIVERSITY

Presenters

- Corey Drummond, National Resource Conservation Service, District Conservationist
- Matt Walsh, National Resource Conservation Service, Area Forester

Both have worked extensively to promote tree health and diversity in the Midwest.

Tree diversity in the landscape is important to reducing disease and insect invaders. Historically the lack of diversity has had dramatic consequences.

We will explore the history of diversity in altering and reducing insects and diseases. Where did the insects and disease originate? Why are they so effective and prolific? Please come and join us as we learn about what is potentially coming, and what are ways to make an impact in our community to make it more resilient towards future invaders.
